Not long since a Missouri editor announced that for just one issue he was going to tell the truth, unvarnished and naked. Here is one item from the issue: "Married, Miss Sylvia Rhodes to James Carrahan, last Saturday evening at the Baptist parsonage. The bride is an ordinary town girl who does not know any more than a rabbit about cooking and never helped her poor old mother three days in her life. She is not a beauty by any means and has a gait like a fat duck. The groom is well known here as an up-to-date loafer, has been living off the old folks all his life and don't amount to shucks no how. They will have a hard life while they live together and the News hastens to extend absolutely no congratulations, for we don't believe any good can come from such a union." The next day there was a funeral.

POSTMASTERS may contribute to campaign funds. They must not however, seek to be elected delegates to political conventions; neither must they become active members of political campaign committees. This is the gist of an order which was issued by Acting Postmaster General Winne. It expresses tersely the attitude of the Roosevelt administration on a question that has engaged the serious attention of civil service reformers for twenty years. Hereafter postmasters who may undertake to interfere in factional politics or who will identify themselves publicly with party machinery will be liable to dismissal for violation of the civil service laws. They may contribute cash to the campaign funds. They may dedicate their salaries in full for the furtherance of a political cause, but they must not show that pernicious activity in politics that some of them have heretofore evinced. All of which is the veriest poppy cock. Postmasters will continue to run their machine as much as in their power and nothing will be said about it provided they work for Roosevelt.—Lexington Democrat.

"Blooded horses" are valuable because they come of well trained ancestry and have themselves been the object of good discipline. But how about men of blood—the English aristocracy for example? Are they better or worse for it? Take the case of Lord Roslyn for instance; is he an argument for a long line of noble descent? He is a full fledged member of the House of Lords. He is coming to this county to go on the stage and people will go to hear him not because he has any ability as an actor, but because he appears to them as do dime museum freaks. He had a career this noble lord. In less than five years he lost over a million dollars trying to pick the winners of race horses. He has often been declared a bankrupt. He became a salesman in a shop. He was not experienced but he drew trade. Then he tried newspaper reporting; then the management of a perfumery store and finally broke into the war in South Africa as a soldier for Queen Victoria. His next turn was as the agent for a syndicate that was trying to "break the bank" at Monte Carlo. He has been discovered and mixed up in many scandals. Now he is coming to us as a ballet dancer and this is said to be his "long suit." And this is the record of this scion of nobility. The blood of noble lineage is certainly flowing veins, to say the least.—Lexington Democrat.

A man who has tried it says: "I was obliged to quit work on account of biliousness. After using one box of Ramon's Liver Pills and Tonic Pills and Tonic Pellets I was restored to perfect health." They are for everyone. Even the most delicate person may use them with beneficial result.—W. T. Brooks, Clark & Co (Isop-imo)
